

US 'war fleet' joined by TWO more nations as armada heads to North Korea

Maddie McCann cop in shock claim tot is living on Algarve 'hidden in plain sight'

Katie Price goes completely TOPLESS and flashes bum in beach reveal

Lizzie Cundy bares all on This Morning in see-through top

An Australian hotel wants you to send them nudes – you won't believe why

ISIS threat to London: Ex-spy warns Brussels-style massacre in UK 'only a matter of time'

A COPYCAT of the ISIS terror attack that today devastated Brussels in London is only a "matter of time".

By Peter Walker, Exclusive / Published 23rd March 2016

WARNING: An ex-spy has predicted that London is next on ISIS' hit list

Ex-spy Tony Schiena also urged Prime Minister David Cameron to scour files of all suspected terrorists already within our borders because "we are at war".

Europe has been rocked after at least 34 people and more than 200 were wounded in a series of rush-hour bombings at an airport and Metro station in the Belgian capital.

Accept Cookies

ISIS, also known as Daesh, claim responsibility for the Brussels attack (<http://www.dailystar.co.uk/news/latest-news/502888/Photo-Brussels-attacks-suspects-Belgium-police-terror>) and chilling images of three suspects strolling passed security are being circulated.

A manhunt is underway for a third man – pictured in the far right in CCTV – who is the only one of the trio not thought to have blown himself up.

FIGHTING: Tony Schiena (far left) trained Kurdish commanders in Iraq

Lieutenant Colonel and Special Detective Schiena – who has witnessed ISIS warfare firsthand in Iraq – said an operation by the militants in London "will happen".

"I think London is a matter of time," said world-renowned mercenary Schiena, speaking to the Daily Star Online today.

"It's a very watched city but it's not impenetrable because they (ISIS) are already here and we don't have a million spies on the ground and we don't have the budget for that.

"Until the entire world is at war with terrorism, until there is a ramping up of procedures, it will happen.

"The only way to stop it is being proactive.

"Going back and scrubbing those intelligence files and certain records but it's very difficult with privacy laws and if only these laws could be a little more lenient."

Schiene thinks the atrocities in Brussels were predictable.

The surveillance expert also believes detectives foiled a greater disaster in capturing key Paris attacks suspect Salah Abdeslam (<http://www.dailystar.co.uk/news/latest-news/502090/Brussels-Belgium-terror-attack-shoot-out-Paris-attacks-terrorist-Salah-Abdeslam-captured>) – but in catching him actually fast-tracked a scaled-down ISIS plot today.

INJURED: Terrorists exploded bombs which wounded more than 200 people

"They're within our borders and this threat is only going to increase," he said.

By continuing to use the site, you agree to the use of cookies. You can find out more by following this link (/cookie-policy).

Accept Cookies

"On the morning of the Paris shootings I was doing an interview with Vice news and I said 'watch out, they're going to retaliate for losing the town of Sinjar in Iraq' and that afternoon they hit Paris.

"And now Brussels, two days after they had a key operative wounded and arrested."

Schiena, born in South Africa to a Dutch mum and Italian dad, was recruited by his college professor into the nation's intelligence service during the Apartheid.

"They're within our borders and this threat is only going to increase"

Tony Schiena

Eerie images of Brussels airport after terror attacks

Wednesday, 30th March 2016

The aftermath of the Brussels attacks; Several bombs went off at Brussels airport, another at a Metro station in Brussels and police search a top floor flat in Brussels for evidence all in pictures.

1 / 69

Damage seen inside the departure terminal following the March 22, 2016 bombing at Zaventem Airport, in these photos made available to Reuters by the Belgian newspaper Het Nieuwsblad

He eventually went private for stints working with military in USA, Baghdad, Afghanistan, Cambodia, France, Hungary, Mongolia, Croatia and in Italy.

The undefeated world heavyweight karate champion hit headlines last year when he lifted the lid on evidence that ISIS were using chemical weapons against Kurds in Iraq.

While training around 30 commanders for Kurdish Peshmerga force last year he claims he clambered five hours up into the mountains to visit an entire community blistered, blinded and paralysed by mustard gas.

The war crime breaches Barack Obama's "red line" policy and the proof persuaded Prince Ali of Jordan to donate a first batch of 1,000 gas masks to the Kurdish force.

DRILLS: Tony Schiena (left) practising a routine with Kurds in Iraq

"ISIS' weapons are weird," said Schiena.

"In some cases it's rudimentary. They've got gas canisters and sown them onto wings.

"Then you also have a lot of former Iraqi military weapons issued by NATO and the US."

He added: "ISIS are as horrific as you're seeing on the news, if not worse

"ISIS are also very good marketers, taking advantage of Twitter, Facebook and other network devices to help in the recruitment process."

HORRIFYING: The staining blisters on Kurds from ISIS' mustard gas attacks

Tributes to Brussels victims

Wednesday, 23rd March 2016

Tributes for the Brussels attack victims began pouring in as soon as news of the devastating attack spread globally

1 / 57

Tower Bridge is lit up to pay tribute to Brussels victims

Schiena, who is first and foremost the chief executive of company MOSAIC (Multi Operational Security Agency Intelligence Company), was in London speaking to press for just one day after a series of conferences on countering human trafficking – another one of his niches.

In another stark plea against terrorism, when asked what he would say to David Cameron given the chance, he added: "I would say 'give your intelligence appliance as much support as possible.

"Allocate funds to analysts so they can go through all intelligence files and suspects. Have another look at them."

The Belgian tricolor is being shone over monuments (<http://www.dailystar.co.uk/news/latest-news/502935/brussels-terror-attack-belgium-flag-eiffel-tower-amsterdam-burj-khalifa-tribute>) tonight across the world in a show of solidarity with Brussels.

RELATED ARTICLES

- Brussels explosion: Fourth blast goes off in Belgian capital
- Brussels police swoop to arrest jihadi suspects – but others AT LARGE
- Manhunt for Brussels suspect as CCTV of 'suicide bombers' seconds before blast emerges